

MILITARY SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES S FOR THE ARMY MAY BE DRAWN

THEY MAY BE CON-
FIDENTLY COUNTED
UPON NOW TO SERVE
THE COUNTRY WELL.

This is not a photograph from battle-scarred France, but a picture of the battalion of the Bordentown Military Institute, New Jersey, taken while the youthful soldiers were on a route march.

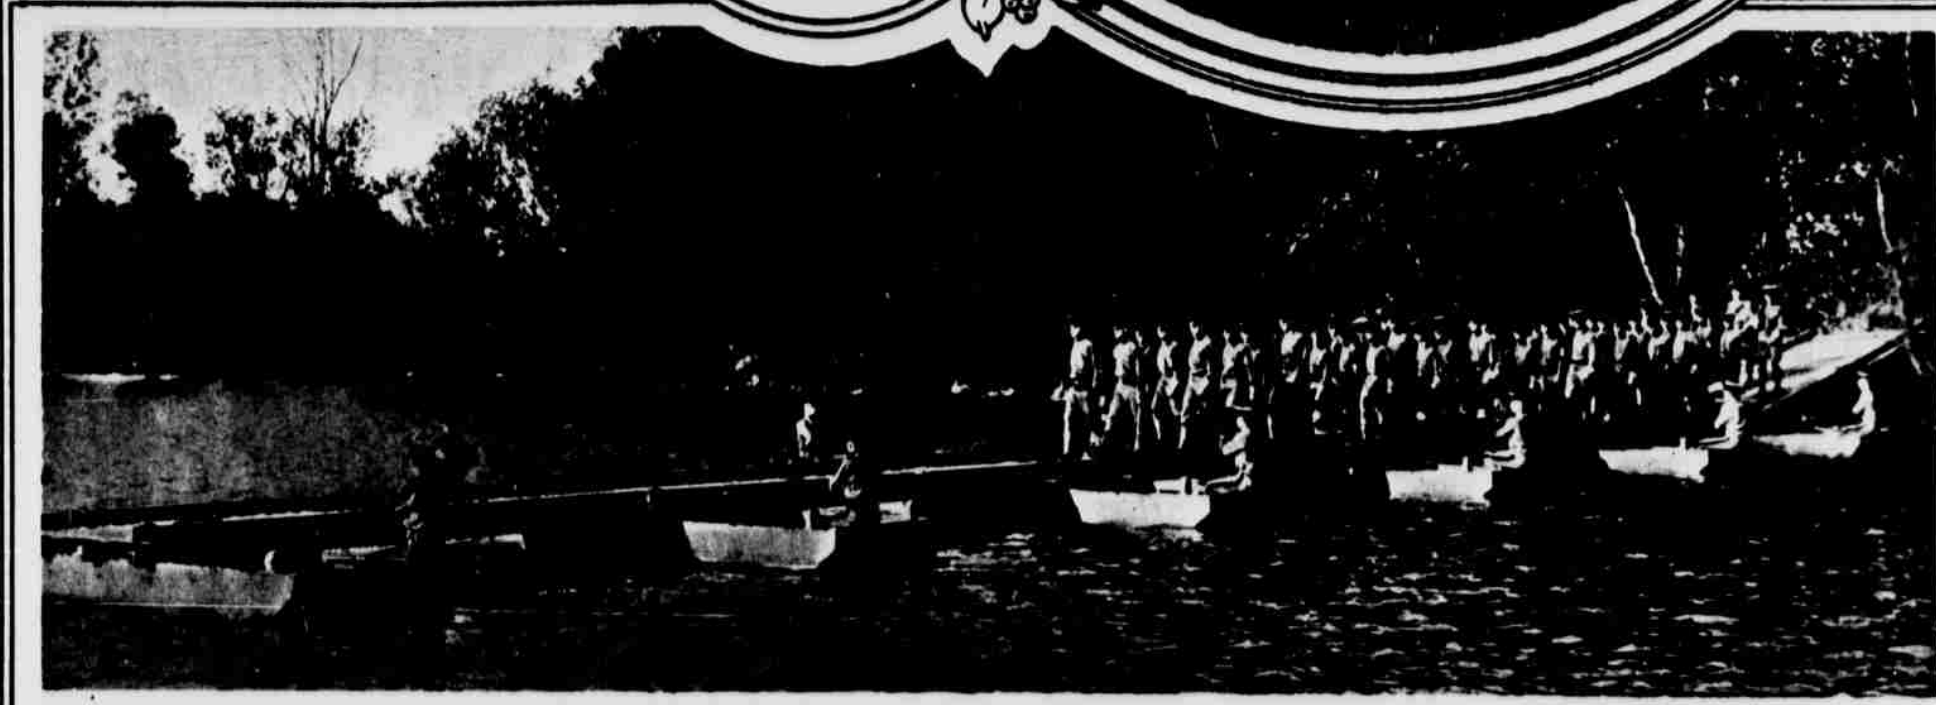

To left—The Missouri
Military Academy at Mexico, Mo., is essentially a school for the soldier. The students have won for themselves
an enviable record.

Above—Rutgers infantry
on the skirmish line.
Their zeal augurs well
for their service in time
of need.

Trench
digging at
the Western Military Academy,
Alton, Ill.

Battery practice at the Virginia Military Institute. Students have been trained there in the art of war since 1839.

standard of excellence. This is evidenced by the field battalion of artillerymen.

A pontoon bridge built by cadets of the engineer corps at Culver, Indiana. Practical work of this kind has made the students of this big military institution noted far and wide.